

Safe & Secure Tennessee Collaborative Memorandum of Understanding

Background

According to the most recent State of the Child in Tennessee report, children in Tennessee experience household and community adversity more than other children in our nation (tn.gov/tccy/stateofthechild). Exposure to these types of adverse childhood experiences (ACEs) are having a significant impact on our children's development and functioning. Research suggests that a community approach to mitigating these effects is not only warranted, but necessary.

In response to this need for community systems of care, SSTN aims to inspire compassion and collaboration through healing centered coaching and training. The Karyn Purvis Institute of Child Development (KPICD) at Texas Christian University has selected SSTN as one of seven Ambassador programs across the country to support the implementation of trauma-informed care. KPICD's research based and empirically validated program, Trust Based Relational Intervention®, forms the basis of our training, coaching, and collaborative services.

Safe & Secure TN Collaborative

Partnership with local and statewide organizations is instrumental in building capacity for trauma-informed care across communities and systems. SSTN initially piloted the Shelby County Collective to support the implementation of trauma-informed practices in the local community. Members of SSTN Collectives receive training in Trust-Based Relational Intervention®, coaching in support of implementing new strategies, and opportunities to connect and collaborate with like-minded organizations. Each collective is led by a local Champion Organization that has demonstrated their commitment to their community and approved by SSTN. These organizations also receive ongoing coaching and support by SSTN to facilitate the provision of high quality services.
